- Guests may be asked to leave or vacate property if seen in violation of guest policy or if management deems necessary. We reserve the right to refuse service to anyone.

Animal Policy

- Harassing or harming any animals, including birds, is prohibited. Petting, brushing and feeding authorized food correctly at our barn petting zoo is permitted. Feeding, touching or disturbing ponies or other animals in our parking lot corrals is also prohibited.
- Service animal means a dog or miniature horse that is trained to do work or perform tasks for, and to assist, an individual with a disability. All other animals, including emotional support, comfort or companion animals, are not considered service animals.
- Because we have kids riding ponies at the farm, all pets and dogs, even service animals (i.e., dogs and miniature horses, as defined above) are prohibited in specific areas of the farm that put our animals and children at risk of injury. Please refer to the CA laws for more information regarding the regulation of service animals in zoos, pony ride facilities, and parks.
- Service animals should remain on a leash or in a harness and under the control of the owner at all times as well as remain unthreatening to all guests and animals in permitted areas of the farm.

California Law Defined

Service Dog Defined

A "service dog," under California law, is a dog trained to help a specific individual with a disability with services such as fetching dropped items, minimal protection work, rescue work, or pulling a wheelchair. There are two important things to note about California's definition of service dogs. First, it is limited to dogs. (But because the ADA authorizes the use of miniature horses as service animals in some limited circumstances, California does as well.)

Second, it is further limited to dogs that are trained to help individuals with their specific requirements. So, no animal other than a dog can qualify as a service animal, even if that animal is trained to assist a person with a disability. Furthermore, even a dog will not qualify as a service dog if it is not individually trained to help an individual with a disability (in a way that is related to his or her disability). In California, pretending to be an owner of a service dog is a criminal misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $1,000 (and/or up to six months imprisonment).

A public place can ask two questions to determine if that individual's dog is a service dog: Is the dog required because of a disability? What work is the dog trained to perform?

What About Zoos, Pony Riding Facilities and Wild Animal Parks?

California has specific rules regarding the use of service dogs at zoos or wild animal parks. Such places are not required to allow service dogs in areas where animals are not separated from the public by a physical barrier. In addition, if allowing service animals into a facility will change or interfere with the fundamental nature of the business, service animals can be restricted. An example of this is restricting service animal access to some exhibits of a zoo, especially where the service animal will be viewed as a predator or as prey by the animal in the exhibit.

Does California Protect the Use of Emotional Support Animals?

The protections discussed above do not apply to emotional support animals. California law, like federal law, doesn't require that emotional support animals be allowed in public places.
